

Revolutionize Assessment

by Rick Stiggins

In this text, Rick Stiggins outlines why it is imperative that we think of assessment in new and different ways than we have in the past, as the role and use of assessments have expanded in our educational context. He also stresses the critical importance of a clear foundational understanding of assessment literacy practices for all educators and administrators that helps support and certify learning, engaging students as partners in the process.

AUDIENCE: Principals, assistant principals, teachers and central office administrators

FACILITATED BOOK GROUPS: Book studies begin in February 2015 and conclude with an Interactive webinar with Rick Stiggins on March 26, 2015 4:00–5:00 PM EST.

Regionally hosted Book Study Groups will use a variety of formats to dialog about key ideas in the book, reflect on district and own practice, and formulate questions for the author, Rick Stiggins. A variety of formats may include: a face-2-face meeting, online meetings/chats, a blend of f2f and virtual. Formats are determined by the regional MAC Reads sponsoring agency and facilitator. All regional Book Study Groups have determined they will gather at their central location to participate in the real time webinar on March 26, 2015. The webinar will also be archived for viewing/use at a later date.

In this powerful book Rick Stiggins—through story, research, and practical ideas—clearly offers ways to transform what seem to be overwhelming roadblocks to learning by involving students and using high quality classroom assessment. This book is an important tool for all leaders as they pursue success for all learners.”
